Journey from Zanskar

"Journey From Zanskar" is a heart-warming film narrated by Richard Gere that features His Holiness the Dalai Lama. It follows the amazing journey of two Tibetan monks who promised the Dalai Lama they would do what they could to save Zanskar's dying Tibetan culture. To do that, they led seventeen children and their families out of Zanskar, a desperately poor valley in Kashmir, and took them on a long, arduous journey, mostly on foot, to Tibetan schools and monasteries. The oldest child was twelve years old.

Frederick Marx ("Hoop Dreams"), an Oscar-nominated film producer, will answer questions about his film after the screening.
